MODULAR SYSTEMS

STAINLESS STEEL COMPARISON

304 Stainless Steel	201/J4 Stainless Steel	430/429 Stainless Steel	Galvanized Steel
Known for its excellent corrosion resistance and durability. It's the choice for high-quality applications.	More affordable but with lesser corrosion resistance. They are commonly used where costs are a primary concern.	Offers moderate corrosion resistance at a lower cost but isn't as durable as 304 in harsh environments.	Features a protective zinc coating for rust prevention but doesn't offer the same clean, polished look or level of corrosion resistance as stainless steels.

PREMIUM MODULAR SYSTEMS APPROACH

Top Layer: 304 stainless steel for unmatched surface durability and resistance to rust and staining.

Middle Layer: MDF (Medium-Density Fiberboard) infill adds strength and stability, making the benchtops sturdier than those with a single material construction.

Bottom Layer: A galvanized steel underlayer enhances overall strength and adds another level of durability, making it more robust.

Extra Support: A U-shaped galvanized support bar beneath the entire structure boosts the benchtop's strength even further, setting these premium systems apart in terms of durability and structural integrity.
